The fish that came back from the dead

Do you know what coelacanths are? They are fish (25) lived in the sea a long, long time ago. In fact, scientists used to think that they disappeared over 65 million years ago. But one day in 1938, Marjorie Courtenay-Latimer, a young woman (26) worked in a museum in a small town in South Africa, received (27) unexpected phone call. It was from a fisherman (28) was called Captain Hendrik Goosen. Marjorie immediately got a taxi and went straight down to (29) sea. There, in Captain Goosen's boat, she saw a very strange fish. Marjorie put the fish in the taxi, and took it back to (30) museum.

She contacted a friend, James Smith, a science teacher at a nearby university, and he immediately told her that it was a coelacanth. It soon became (31) most famous fish in the world! Scientists gave it the name Latimeria chalumnae, and the place (32) Marjorie first saw the fish is now known as Latimer's Landing.
